Merry...

I know you haven't spoken to Linda in a while, but I would like your help in convincing her to slow down and not let this job of hers further impact her health. I'm convinced that whatever is wrong with her is being aggravated by her stress and tension caused by 12+ hour days and weekend meetings etc..

Lately she's been weak, wobbly at night, stumbling up and down stairs, and mumbling incomprehensible stuff in her sleep about work and projects and meetings. While walking into work last week, someone behind her said that she looked like the example from his Fitness for Duty class he'd just taken. (She looked drunk since she was weaving when she walked). She's supposed to go to Scripps at the end of the month.

Could you help me talk some sense into her? She knows something's wrong... she isn't saying "There's nothing wrong with me", but she won't stay home from work. Last night was the straw that broke the camels back... she reminded me that she wants to be laid to rest by her mom and dad in Newport, and would I promise to do that... This is very difficult for me to talk about to you, but I think I need to call in every available resource to ensure she's ok. She loves you so much and maybe she'll listen to you. I've said the same things to her so many times that I don't think she knows I'm serious when I tell her how important this is.

Thanks,

=Paul=
